Dear Beau,

I finally found time to get at that contract again. My comments are enclosed. I apologize for having taken so long about it, but I've had more things coming at me than I can handle. This delay probably won't make much difference anyway, since I can't sign until I get Bonnie's approval, and I suspect he won't be very prompt in giving it. I don't anticipate any difficulty in working out our differences as to the details of the contract, and we'll probably have that done by the time I get Bonnie's approval.

Bonnie would like to have copies of all the correspondence between you and me. Would you please send these to him? Also, if Bonnie asks you for any other information or documents, you have my permission to send him what he requests.

I've softened on the 60 Minutes issue. Bonnie has asked me at least to consider giving them an interview, so I'm willing to consider it. Whether I will do any more than consider it remains to be seen. Also, I've decided that I have no objection to Mello's giving 60 Minutes an interview about his book, provided that all information he gives them is first passed by Bonnie. But I still think that you and Mello should not have given 60 Minutes the manuscript so precipitously (your letter to me of Dec. 11, p. 2, ¶ 4).

Anyway, merry Christmas and happy New Year.
